THE QUESTION OF NERVES

Mellon is to go home by steamer. Reading between the lines from Sydney, Nova Scotia, the report appears to be that it is a nervous wreck, the result of his westward flight, or of the long wait for favorable weather for the return voyage, or both.

That points to the greatest obstacle that will be to overcome before trans-Atlantic flying can be established on a commercial basis. Most people do not want to be nervous when they are flying. They are likely to be set down in that condition on the other side, if they should reach there at all.

While panic gripped the air to ferry the traveler across the ocean in less than a week in comfort and security, the airplane will have to prove its dependability as a good means of transport has yet done so before commercial airlines between this continent and Europe could sell enough tickets to pay expenses.

A REMOTE CONTINGENCY

An Iowa professor thinks may turn out to be a Frankenstein, that by combining disease and prolonging life by means of the world may become too great to be fed and clothed.

This recalls the prediction of Sir William Crookes in 1900 that death would be a thing of the past, and that the world would be starving for food, or for short articles at best.

The end of the thirty-year period found with more wheat and other foodstuffs, and more clothes and the materials for making it, than people knew what to do with.

Theoretically no doubt, there is a point where population will overtake production, but it is too far away for present alarm. The problem of the present generation is to keep from running up on barrenness and sterility, and science is showing us how to do it.

The practical danger is that science will keep too many consumers in the world, but that mankind has not yet discovered how to distribute the necessities and luxuries of life, or to keep demand in line with the increasing supply.

TAXES UP; EARNINGS DOWN

In degree, and fairly large degree, what the Kild communities said about the over-taxation of the people of British Columbia may be said of taxation in every province in Canada.

Statistics have been being published frequently to show that while the Dominion in the last ten years has made a fairly consistent attempt to reduce its taxes, the provinces have not.

Provinces have been being published frequently to show that while the Dominion in the last ten years has made a fairly consistent attempt
to reduce its taxes, the provinces have not.

The accumulation of provincial debt mainly concerns, and the scale of provincial "services" and expenditures were set in, years when the earnings of the taxpayers were at their highest.

Now are. Should the earnings go up to their former level the burden could be carried. But what if they do not?

After three years of vain expectations it is time to face the fact that what prices may stabilize momentarily at something near the present levels, with other commodity prices in keeping. It is to be hoped that it will not happen. But members of the legislature will have to face the fact that the possibility that it will happen, and in getting ready to defray their multi-million dollar budgets as fast as they can be done without paying great numbers of people out of employment when there is no work for them to find.

THE MOURNERS

Eventually the financial measures adopted at Washington to "save the banks" are not doing it hundred per cent. Two banks crashed in Idaho one day, with rumors of $100,000,000 in liabilities sustained. Whether they went down under a load of "toxic assets" or because they had given out may credit is not explained, and does not affect the fact that they are out of business.

There will be heavy losses for the shareholders, but the money of depositors will be kept up until the liquidation procedure is through with it, if it is ever paid in full. This in turn must affect the standing of other business concerns, probably producing other failures, and extending the chain of losses and the effects of unemployment.

Creditors are supposed to criticize the banks of the Dominion on two counts. That they are too big; and that they are over-cautious in lending money to people who want to borrow. The latter incident is a fresh reminder of the fact that the bank run by an open-handed banker is not an unusual thing in the community.

No Canadian bank has gone "broke" since the depression came, and none is liable to unless the whole financial structure should collapse. No bank shareholder has lost his investment and been thrown into the ranks of the unemployed for relief.
No depositor has asked for his money without getting it. The country has been spared the series of commercial failures that must inevitably follow when a bank goes under and brings ruin to de-positors and share-holders.

There are it may be supposed, a good many people in Montreal now who would like to do their banking with the kind of a bank that doesn't go broke, even if it were a big bank, and one that would not hand out credit quite so freely as a small, local bank commonly do.

SIDE GLANCES - By George Clark

A reader who pays this column the compliment of saying that he got therefrom the first intelligible statement of what Canada gains from the inter-Empire trade agreement, may now what it is Canada will have to give in return.

Perhaps, as the former reference merely dealt with the highlights of what Canada obtains, it would be better to re-state the whole matter.

In the first place let it be understood that the present preference which Britain gives by way of free entry of Canadian goods into the Empire amounts to a tariff concession of 10 per cent. on 10 per cent tariff against foreign goods, expires on Nov. 15, 1932.

Britain, under the new commercial treaties, agrees to extend freedom of entry for Canadian goods. Both Parliaments will meet before November 15 to ratify the agreements.

Britain agrees to impose duties on the following foodstuffs from foreign countries, which at present are admitted free into the United Kingdom—wheat, barley, oats, apples, pears, grapes, and other products of Canada. By this means Canadian wheat will be a preference of 6 cents a bushel, butter 15 per cent. cheese, 10 per cent. of the value, apples and pears, four shillings and six pence per cwt; eggs from one shilling to one and ninepence per ten dozen, condensed milk, five shillings per cwt and copper, four cents per pound.

Under a second schedule Canada is to be considered a ten per cent protection it now has against foreign goods, and into Britain on lumber, fresh sea fish, canned fish, asbestos, zinc and lead, all of which are products of Canada.

The British Parliament is to be asked to remove present restrictions on the importation of live cattle from Canada, to increase the quota for the free importation of Canadian hams and bacon to 2,500 cwt, and to continue for a period of ten years the new Canadian preferences on Canadian goods.

Articles in the second schedule are to be given additional protection in the event of foreign "dumping". This is a vital matter to the Canadian lumber industry, which will not be able to compete on a ten per cent protection against the cheap lumber of Russia produced by slave labor.

What does Canada give Britain?

The Parliament of Canada is to be asked to give free entry or to impose preferential duties in favor of 220 British commodities, the list of which is not in the published text of the proposed treaty.

Unofficial understandings are being worked out between the iron and steel interests of the mother country and Canada, covering proposed steel ware tables cooked and iron, for example, 10 per cent. glass, toilet accessories, guns, steel plates above 65 inches and a large number of British textiles are also included in the proposed free list. About $300,000,000 has been given in Pittsburgh for steel will probably go into Canada in consequence of the tariff reduction.

Canada also agrees to constitute a Canadian Tariff Board and to give the British government or any British industry the right to apply for equal treatment in the Canadian market, which will establish Canadian industry. Canada is not to make any increase against British goods unless an inquiry is made by the Tariff Board and its recommendations obtained. Dumping duties against British goods are to be modified by the Canadian government and abolition of British duties is to be discontinued.

Similar agreements are being made between the independent nations of the Empire.

All told, these agreements will affect a quarter of the entire population of the globe.

They should, if carried out in a sincere spirit, result in the most beneficial of results to Canada and Canada, while at the same time preserving established industries and opening up an Empire market for the product of the Canadian farm, forest and mine.

It is a logical result of Premier Bennett's policy of "a bargain for a bargain".

It means the establishment of a United States of Great Britain on the economic principles which made the United States of America a successful planned, it will be the greatest step in the history of the world since the signing of the Magna Carta.

Curly Q's Girl Friends Don't Stick

Other Chaps Take His "Dates"—What's the Matter? He Asks

By VIRGINIA LEE

GIRLS think this lot is better than that of boys. Boys seem to them as free, unsheltered. If they like a girl they can ask her for a date. If they haven't seen her for some time they can call her. They can take a girl or leave her as they wish.

While the poor girl sits at home waiting for the phone to ring, the boy is out making a lot of money.

As if that isn't bad enough, the girl has to call her.

Well, girls, boys also have their troubles some time they are "Q's" with the girls at all. They can see why other fellows' dates always are accepted while theirs are turned down. And don't think for a minute that their mind being turned down

Character Close-Up

SENSITIVE-NESS IS SHOWN BY THIS BROW

Many a smart looking young man suffers from a severe inferiority complex because a girl has refused to date him.

CURLY Q. All I can think of is tell you, Curly Q. I don't see you and to get first-hand information as to how you look, etc., to say you are young and inexperienced in the matter of smarting females. That is one trouble. You lack confidence and more defeat when you are in other men's company.

I would advise perseverance and a willingness to learn the fine points of treating the fair sex by watching those who are successful.

You may, of course, lack certain finesse in dealing with women. This will come as you grow older, as don't get discouraged.

I would advise perseverance and a willingness to learn the fine points of treating the fair sex by watching those who are successful.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: May I say a word in Honey's favor? She certainly is right in regard to marrying a man older than herself. I have been married seven years to a man 18 years my senior and I haven't regretted it. I am as much in love with him now as I was the first time I met him.

We have three children who love their father dearly. We get along splendidly. Have had our share of hardships, as my husband was ill twice.

I have stuck to him through all of it and had the best of a wonderful disposition and it's easy to love him. So I say to Honey, if she loves this man, marry him, and I hope she will be as happy as I have been."

HONEY'S HONEY: Which proves me again that age makes little difference, doesn't it? It's the personality that counts. I think your fine husband has a very appealing smile and look to you both and thank you for your letter, which I hope Honey sees.

I.M. I haven't space for your letter today, but here is your answer. If you work in the same department, isn't there some one in your department who knows the girl and could engineer an introduction? Or isn't there some one working with her that you know? In either case you could arrange a meeting.

If not, you could take your courage in both hands, walk up to her and say, "Pardon me, I work in the same department as you, and my name is such and such. Would you have any objection to letting me get better acquainted with you?"

You even could wait for her when she is over in order to meet her and get acquainted.

The only way to overcome shyness is to think of others and not forget yourself. It takes time and courage.

LOVE: Why not let that young man go. Look Love, and try to forget him. If as a love is cancelled keep from paying marked attention to other girls he certainly would make a very unsatisfactory husband.

I know it is easier to say forget him than it is to do so, but it can be done and I am sure you would be happier in the long run than if you married in October disheartened.

YOUNG ANNIVERSARIES

Question—What is the first wedding anniversary? The answer—What decorations are used for new and for the fifth and tenth anniversaries—the so-called wedding anniversary. I'm especially interested in the fifth, as that is to be my own affair, the other three are my sister's anniversaries.

Answer—The fifth anniversary (cotton wedding) is signified by gifts of furniture, ornaments, china, little tables, etc. The floral decorations may be in the pentagon (five-sided form) or in the figure 5, as the Roman numeral V. For odd table favors a pair of wooden animals from a boy's Ark may be arranged at each place.

The first anniversary is the paper wedding; the second is the cotton wedding, with gifts and decorations to emphasize the different occasions. (The tenth anniversary thing known as the tin wedding) finds itself out of modern custom, so far as fun is concerned. For tenth anniversary

Fashion Show To Be Feature of Strand Theatre Re-Opening Saturday

Two-Act Skit Will Be Presented Along With Regular Film Program

The doing of a group of fashioning, running in connection with the background for a display of beautiful gowns, shoes, millinery and wraps in "Fall Fashion Revue" is a clever two-act skit which opens at the Strand theatre Saturday evening.

three quarters of an hour. Act 1 is laid in the beautiful home of Patricia Franklin, just returned from a fashionable finishing school. Mrs. Franklin is entertaining her daughter's friends at tea and the guests who arrive wear the many smart afternoon gowns from Morton's Limited. In the course of the party, the girls discuss the Mannequin Style Show which members of their chapter, I.O.D.E. are putting on in the near future.

MANNEQUIN SHOW Act 2 shows this Mannequin Show in progress. Against a highly decorative background, the models parade first in up-to-date fall coats with matching hats, then later in formal evening gowns and wraps.

Miss Irene Pierce plays the part of Patricia Franklin with true finesse, others in the cast being French designer, Theron Jewett; modeler Florence Knight; buying boss, Hazel Van Buskirk; Myra Murdoch; Ann Bernstein; Pat Roney; Ida Charlesworth; Audrey Michaels; Ella Richards; Florence Marshall; Emily Crawford; Alta Magoon; Edna Brown and Helen Nash.

The two dance pieces by Dorothy Murray and Harold Van Buskirk in the first act is a clever innovation and Miss Murray also leads a dance number in which these taking part are: Edna Brown, Maxine Chevalier, Helen Davidson, Betty Cairns, June Nicholls, Ruth Carse and Betty Barker.

Miss Mabelle Slick is directing the production, and Mr. Al Preston is in charge of the music, with Mrs. Jack Barley as accompanist.

Store, and Muckleston's Beauty Parlor are responsible for the costumes. Tea will be served by Dorothy's. The picture "Two Against the World" presents Constance Bennett in an entirely new type of role, a role that she has not until now offered the screen. Miss Bennett plays her first comedy characterization and so admirably does she (1) the role and so cleverly and so convincingly does she portray it that critics everywhere acclaim it as one of her finest to date. The story is one of the best of the current season, combining delicious sprightly humor with just enough dramatic romance to make it excellent all-round entertainment. Miss Bennett's wardrobe is, as always, as superbly chic as the Paris creation can make it a factor that will, of course, appeal to the ladies. In fact, Mr. Entwistle has further catered to his lady patronage by including as one of the main features of the program "A Fall Fashion Style Revue" which is under the special auspices of Morton's Limited and directed by Miss Mabelle Slick, who has been responsible for the success of many musical productions locally. Miss Slick has cleverly blended her Style Revue with some exceptionally good musical and dance numbers, featuring such well-known local stars as Miss Dorothy Murray, Miss Irene Pierce, Mr. H. V. Collet, Mr. Theron Jewett and many others. The Strand Theatre grand re-opening program is one of the finest Mr. Entwistle has had the pleasure of presenting and it is one you should not miss.

TURLES BACK BASH CRASH CALLED ENGE

by BILL LEWIS

I have been confounding for some little time just that prospect for a good senior Eskimo Canadian football team here this year was unusually bright. And now I'm beginning to wonder if this is one prediction that may not come to be right. True, the season is just a couple of short weeks away and the Eskimos are beginning their workout, but their array of talent looks such that it may be able to overcome even this handicap.

They held a workout down at Brentwood Park last night and we held another workout on Sunday which time it is expected that the coach for the coming season will be named.

There was plenty of enthusiasm around the city yesterday when baseball fans learned of the probability that an all-star American League team, including such stars as Lefty Grove, Vernon Gibson, Dick Dickey, Nick Altrock, Al Schatz and the like, might visit Edmonton next month following the world series.

White Eskimo Canada for years has had visits from major league stars in search of duck shooting and game hunting, but it has never played host to such a collection of luminaries as are planned to come here for duck shooting and to play a "ball game." And it is certain that they will be well received by the Eskimos.

Pro hockey for the purists this coming winter is still being talked around and about the town. The Eskimo fans who want a professional club performing as well as representative.

Certain skating is going on at the moment that may result in a league being formed within a very short time.

Marking back in the recent Olympic Games for a moment, the Eskimo fans who want a professional club performing as well as representative.

But it strikes me that Canada may help to shorten the period of the Eskimo supremacy at the moment. It is a fact that the Eskimo fans in every town of any size throughout the country, summer and fall.

Most visitors in the grape vine route that most other of our old friend, Don Miguel Bickley, Edmonton's major sports masthead, will show Vancouver wrestling fans his best tricks and let them hear his most forceful words. He is a man who is as good as he appears on the opening card of the big Canadian championship wrestling tournament.

There are a total of 10 middleweight entered in the competition. The Eskimo fans in every town of any size throughout the country, summer and fall.

Playing rules of the Canadian Rugby Union for 1922 which were revised a great deal at the last meeting of that body, have been put to hand and embody many new features that will please fans and players alike.

FENCE BALLS BEAT DETROIT

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 2.—A brace of home runs in the second inning brought the downed 4-0 victory of the Philadelphia Athletics over the Detroit Tigers. The Athletics won the series, three games to two.
